Virtual Learning Lab: Campus Suicide Prevention

This online learning lab consists of different modules that can assist colleges and universities with setting goals, planning, and implementing effective suicide prevention programs and trainings.

Colleges and Universities

Suicide and suicidal behaviors are a major concern for colleges and universities. Suicide is a leading cause of death among college and university students in the United States (see Scope of the Problem section).¹ In addition to the students who die by suicide, many others struggle with suicidal thoughts and other mental health problems. Fortunately, colleges and universities also provide unique opportunities for comprehensive suicide prevention planning.

Recognizing the importance of addressing suicide prevention in these settings, the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration \(SAMHSA\) has provided grants to support suicide prevention in campus communities since 2005. For more on the Garrett Lee Smith Suicide Prevention Program, see our Grantees page.

Why Address Suicide Prevention

- › Mental health issues often first appear between the ages of 18 and 24, so colleges are uniquely situated to help these young people.²
- › Students' mental health can affect their academic performance.
- › Suicidal thoughts and behaviors can impact the entire campus community.

How Colleges and Universities Can Take Action

The best way to prevent suicide is to use a comprehensive approach that includes these key components:

- › Promote social networks and connectedness
- › Improve access to mental health services on and off campus
- › Identify and assist students who may be at risk for suicide
- › Be prepared to respond when a suicide death occurs

Virtual Learning Lab: Campus Suicide Prevention

4 Modules:

- ✓ Collaboration
- ✓ Crisis Protocols
- ✓ Mental Health Resources
- ✓ Prevention Planning

Do your protocols clearly and consistently describe what to do when someone is in crisis?

2 Choose your strategies Back to steps

Successfully preventing suicide requires a variety of strategies that complement each other and are part of a comprehensive approach.

When choosing your strategies, consider best practices for prevention: select programs and trainings that incorporate the principles of effective prevention, that follow safe messaging guidelines, and that have evidence of effectiveness. READ MORE
